

God's vision for our lives is that we glorify him by doing good for others radically, creatively, and abundantly. That's simply the second greatest commandment: "Love your neighbor as yourself." We love ourselves creatively and abundantly and, therefore, we are to love others creatively and abundantly as well. The energy and initiative that we put into advancing our own welfare we are to also put into advancing the welfare of others. We are to see our entire lives as avenues for doing good.

You don't have to run to the hills or escape 9-5 to have a meaningful life. You can have the highest possible significance in your work right now -- whatever you are doing -- if you do it for the good of others and glory of God.

from MATT PERMAN

AUTHOR OF WHAT'S BEST NEXT